The film is based on the 2015 novel of the same name written by Mohit Munot. The film is about four generations of a family in a small town in northern India, and their conflicts and conflicts within the family as they grow up. It was made on a budget of ₹15 crore. The film opened to critical acclaim and was a commercial success, grossing ₹35 crore at the box office, becoming the year's third highest-grossing Hindi film. Plot The story is set in the fictional small town of Kalsubai in Uttar Pradesh in 1983, India. Four generations of a family, represented by the four male protagonists of the film, grow up in that town. The first protagonist is Salim (Arshad Warsi), a college-educated engineering graduate who takes care of his parents and his younger sister, Samaira (Madhuri Dixit). His other younger sister, Samay (Huma Qureshi), stays back with her family in Kalsubai to look after her father, who had been in the PWD department. His parents live in a very average house and are forced to rely on Samay to support them financially. Samay's mother is a strict matriarch who tries her best to make her daughter a good marriage prospect, and shuns her male friends because she's very conservative. Samay wants to be a doctor but her mother wants her to marry a rich man, so she does her best to encourage her to pursue a course of study which will make her more eligible for marriage. She decides to shift to Delhi to take up a medical college course. Her father, Mohan Singh, who is also a schoolteacher, doesn't want his daughters to live in a big city, so he wants Samay to marry an accountant named Sanjay. Samay, however, has different plans. After Samay left to Delhi, her parents tried to set her up with Sanjay, but she was unfazed, not budging an inch. At college, she meets with a few of her teachers, who try to convince her to enroll for a medical course. She pays little attention to their advice. She wants to be a doctor but her mother insists on marriage. Samay gets irritated at this kind of pressure and becomes rebellious. Her father is subjected to terrible financial problems which affect him and he finds it hard to pay his daily expenses, and is being insulted by Sanjay. 82157476af
